

Moto 4 MS Foundation

We all know that once you are a dirt biker, you are somehow committed for life. Riding is a fever, addiction, and way of life. When you fall, you dust off and get back on. When you end up in the hospital with a long recovery and years of physical therapy, you work hard to get strong so you can ride again as soon as possible. All of these challenges are conquered in order to RIDE.

MS (Multiple Sclerosis) on the other hand, is a chronic neurological disease that breaks down the protective outer layer that surrounds nerves. With double vision, radical muscular stiffness, harsh fatigue, swallowing difficulties, and brain function impairment, the challenge to ride becomes heroic. Jim Curzon, MS diagnosed in 2006, not only dusts off and continues the quest to ride (finishing the Ironman Class in the SCORE Baja 1000's 1296 mile race in 2007), but he has dedicated his energy toward raising funds for MS. Check out this unique site collecting donations to help provide current treatments for the MS diagnosed and support the on-going quest to find a cure. It is still unknown why MS occurs.
